STATE OF OHIO MUST PAY GASOLINE TAX

ATTORNEY GENERAL CRABBE MAKES RULING ON QUESTION

Tax For Highway Department Alone Will Probably Be $100 a Day—Counties and Cities Are in the Same Situation—Storage Facilities Might Be Arranged.

The state of Ohio must pay 2 cents a gallon tax on the gasoline it uses or evade its own law by importing the gasoline from another state.

Attorney General Crabbe ruled that the law which imposes the tax makes no provision for a rebate to the state, cities or other subdivisions which purchase gasoline, and since they pay the tax at the time of purchase, there is no escape from the excise.

Cities may take advantage of the loophole and buy their gasoline in other states, but the state probably will not. At the same time it became apparent that, with virtually all the near-by states levying a gas tax, some of them heavier than that of Ohio, the purchaser of gasoline outside the Ohio limits merely pays the money into the treasury of adjacent states, unless it is shipped from considerable distances.

Under Ohio laws it is impossible to tax the state directly. The gas tax, however, is not a direct tax on the state, but nominally a tax on the dealers in gasoline. The consumer, of course, pays the tax, since it was immediately added to the cost of fuel by all the large companies operating in the state.

The state highway department alone has more than 500 trucks and cars, which are in daily use. If these consume, on the average, only 10 gallons a day, it would mean a total consumption of 5000 gallons a day. The tax on this quantity would be $100 a day for the highway department alone and the average consumption estimate is regarded as very low.

This department is the biggest single consumer of gasoline in the state, but there are many other uses for which it is purchased by Ohio. Various institutions which consume gasoline may obtain rebates, at considerable trouble, for that which they use in stationary engines and tractors, under the present law. State owned motor cars, however, are used on the highways and these cannot escape.

Gasoline now is purchased by the highway director for his department when it is to be used in actual road construction or maintenance. Gasoline used in cars not directly engaged in highway construction or repair is purchased thru John P. Brennan, state purchasing agent. Mr. Brennan also buys gasoline for other departments.

There can be no present purchase of gasoline outside the state for state use, he said, because there are no facilities for storing it. It would be necessary to buy each day's supply daily, and this solution of the tax problem is out of the question unless the state is prepared to spend millions to install storage equipment.

It would also be necessary to provide tank cars to transport the supplies to the actual scene of operations, since gasoline is now purchased by "books" which may be exchanged for it at almost any point. It probably never could be economically obtained and distributed by the state for this purpose.

Cities, however, may take advantage of the loophole and avoid the tax if they can manage to avoid it in other states, it was believed. Most Ohio cities use considerable quantities of gasoline in fire departments, police cars and street maintenance and repair trucks. Storage facilities might be economically arranged in central points for city use, since the range of activities is smaller. Counties might run into the same problem that would confront the state however.

However, it would seem that the question of whether or not the state pays the tax on the gasoline it uses on the roads, is a matter of no moment. Keeping up the state highways is the obligation of the state and the money must be forthcoming from some source. That source is the people, and if the state pays the tax on the gasoline it uses, the people pay that much less in another way and thus pay the state's gasoline tax. If the state pays no gasoline tax, then the people, who are the state, pay for the damage the state cars do to the roads.

In either event you bring up at the same place. It is the difference between tweedledee and tweedledum.

CAPTAIN E. L. HAWK MAY BE CHOSEN GRAND COMMANDER

Circleville Comrades Are Fondly Hoping He May Receive This Well Deserved Honor—Makes Frequent Trips to This County Where He Organized His Company Many Years Ago.

The Sacramento, California, Daily Union recently had a long article in reference to Captain E. L. Hawk, who is well known to many of our people. Captain Hawk recruited his company at Camp Circleville on the David Ludwig farm near this city and has many times made the trip from the Pacific coast in order to be with and entertain his old comrades in this county, all of whom are fondly hoping he may be chosen as the head of the National encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The Sacramento Union says:

"While legging it across the field toward the enemy's cannon, a husky six footer in my company overtook me and tucked me under his arm. I think the happiest moment of my life was when, with the aid of that trooper, I was enabled to be the first to put my hand on one of 'Johnnie Reb's' brass pieces."

"Captain E. L. Hawk of the 114th Ohio infantry, which distinguished itself in the Civil war, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and who now is now being mentioned as a candidate for the national commandership of the G. A. R. chuckled. His five foot three body shook with mirth as he reiterated the most "exciting" moments of his five years' participation in the Rebellion.

Draws Vivid Picture.

"In spite of his 84 years, shrap, clear eyes peered thru his spectacles as he drew a vivid, dramatic picture of the battle of Thompson's Hill, fought May 1, 1863, just after the Union forces had crossed the river on the way to Vicksburg.

Transforming his office in the Nicolaus building into a veritable battlefield by his realistic picturization, Captain Hawk, Civil war veteran, lived again the day of '63.

"Late in the evening of May 1, while my company was supporting Foster's battery and the fight had almost closed on our right, Generals Grant, McPherson and others came riding over," the captain recalled and he held one arm out in front of him, pointing to imaginary ramparts.

Grant Present.

"Johnnie Reb's batteries opened on us.

" 'Can't you stop that?' I heard General Grant ask.

"And then our battery started in doing a little work and was retaliating in fine shape when our great German General Osterhaus jumped off his horse, and shouted:

" 'Come on! I'll lead you!'

"And then we started on that race across a field of death in the face of the rebels' terrific battering. I thought we were being fired to pieces. Our hearts were in our throats, but we never faltered.

"I did not look back to see if my company was following me—I knew the men were at my heels. Spying an enemy gun still belching forth its death, I decided to get it. And by the aid of a big six footer, who came running to my assistance we captured it.

Won Promotion.

"That man later was made a sergeant and shortly after attained the rank of lieutenant.

"Under the fire and smoke of warfare, men are made. When death is lurking, the qualities of a man come to the fore."

The automatic stoker that carries left ear and injuring and cutting his head severely and he may have sustained internal injuries. He was taken to Dr. Jackson's office in Mader & Eberts ambulance, where he received surgical aid. The ear was sewed on and if no complications set in it will adhere and become firmly attached again.

Mrs. Evans, the vicar's wife, was interested in the well-being of those under her husband's care. She knew every family in the village and most of their illnesses as well, which is saying a good deal.

One morning she met Mrs. Fogarty in the main street.

"Well, and how is your husband getting on now?" asked Mrs. Evans, with a kindly smile at the old woman.

"Well, replied Mrs. Fogarty, shaking her head, "sometimes he's better and sometimes he's worse, but from the way he growls and takes on when he's better Oi think he's better when he's worse."

The old lady had had a severe illness, and she was relating its vicissitudes to a friend or two in the grocer's shop when the minister came in.

Need Home-Grown Seed for Success

Italian and Chilean Varieties Prove Unsatisfactory in Most Parts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More general use of home-grown clover seed, in the opinion of the United States Department of Agriculture, would do more than any other one thing toward solving the problem of red clover failure in this country. If methods can be found by which small acreages of domestic red-clover seed can be conveniently harvested and hulled for home use, more dependence could be put upon the supply of home-grown seed and less would need to be imported.

Clover Turned Under.

It is known, says the department, that throughout the country, east of the Allegheny mountains at least, there are every year thousands of acres of good second-growth clover that is turned under instead of being harvested for seed, because in those neighborhoods no hullers are to be had and the farmer is not able to harvest and save the seed economically. If these farmers could save their own seed, the drain on the market stocks represented by their requirements would be materially decreased, and the seed produced in the states where it is grown commercially would be more nearly adequate to supply the demand.

For at least fifteen years the United States has been a heavy importer of red-clover seed. Most of this seed has come from Italy and France. Evidence is accumulating to show that the Italian seed is not satisfactory for use in America. Co-operative trials which the department has been conducting with experiment stations in the Middle West have shown that the plants from Italian seed are much more likely to winterkill than those from American seed, that they are more susceptible to certain diseases and that they often give a smaller crop even when the stand is otherwise apparently satisfactory.

Unsatisfactory Seed.

As far as the investigations of the department have progressed it was found that Italian seed is practically everywhere unsatisfactory and that French and Chilean seed, while giving good yields in some parts, is unsatisfactory in Iowa, Minnesota and elsewhere where the winters are severe.

Means of harvesting and saving the seed from the numerous small acreages of red clover instead of importing seed would do much to bring the clover crop back into a dependable part of the rotation. Red clover is par excellence the restorative crop for rotations in the corn belt, says the department, but continued failures of the crop have caused a steady decline in acreage. This decline in acreage over a long period of years has adversely affected the yields of all other crops involved in the rotation.

The importance of home-grown seed is especially great in the southern and southeastern part of the clover belt, where the anthracnose disease is common and often very destructive. Here plants that survive and produce seed are quite likely to have some degree of resistance to the disease.

Truck Crops Show Large Increase in Production

That the American diet is becoming more and more diversified is indicated by the enormous increase in the production of vegetables during the past three or four years. These crops, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, had a gross value of $313,000,000 in 1924—an increase of 34 per cent over 1921. Over 2,300,000 acres are now devoted to the growing of such crops as tomatoes, early Irish potatoes, strawberries, cantaloupes, green peas, onions, lettuce, celery, cabbage, asparagus, cucumbers, snap beans, watermelons, sweet corn, spinach, peppers, cauliflower, carrots, eggplant and a number of others.

The development of the canning industry and the improvement of cold storage, transportation and marketing facilities have made possible this improvement in the diet which is so important to the health of the people—especially of those who are forced to live in congested centers of population.

Truck crops, grown for sale, are a product of an intensive agriculture. They require much skilled labor, careful attention during the growing season and on most soils the use of rather heavy applications of commercial fertilizer. In fact it does not usually pay to put so much labor into these crops without using plenty of fertilizer to insure profitable yields.

When Mammoth Clover Is Wanted for Seed Only

When mammoth clover is wanted for seed it is well to either pasture the field until about the first of June or clip it, leaving the clippings on the field to act as mulch. If short of pasture use this field of clover early in the season for that purpose. However, if the fertility of the soil is of most importance, let the clover grow, then in June roll or pole it down, going around the field in the same direction that the mower will go. The heads of the clover will straighten up and the seed crop can be harvested without handling so much straw. By this method a heavy growth of organic matter is left on the ground to be turned under when the ground is plowed for corn.

Shepherd's Important Find

The existence of silver in Peru, South America, was discovered accidentally in 1630 by a shepherd, tending his flock at Cerro de Pasco, who was amazed to find stones, under a fire he had built, melted.

Never before has color played so important a part in the wardrobe, observes a writer in the Kansas City Star. The tendency of all ages to choose the hues of the rainbow has brought beauty to some and grief to many. Many a woman who has worn black-and-white or navy blue with distinction is encouraged to indulge in her fancy in one of the vivid tones only to destroy completely her distinction of being well-dressed.

There are many colors for every woman if she will choose carefully by analyzing her own color tones and studying the effect of the various shades on her complexion. Not for everyone is the natural shade of kasha. The definite type with dark hair and clear skin looks smart in the neutral tones. But the sallow-skinned or drab-haired becomes lifeless-looking in this colorless gray regardless of the smartness of the shade. There are tones that carry tints of rose and blue and green that may be used to reflect color into the face and give the garment character even on this type of wearer.

Blue has long been a favorite with discriminating women who know it in this navy shade to be most becoming and serviceable. The lighter shades may sallow the skin, and the vivid, bright blues lighten pale eyes. The grayed tones, pervenche, periwinkle, corn flower, are the ideal choice of the blonde with clear skin. The brunette whose skin is not on the olive cast may wear it, but it is not her best choice to develop her best coloring.

Ashes of roses, which the French have favored for some time, is coming to us in the facing on the brims of the large hats, in neckwear, and even for some entire frocks.

The browns, which apparently are of never-ending popularity, need care in their selection. Nothing is more pathetic than a drab or dark-skinned woman in a warm brown. Cigarette, havana, beige, thrush, hazel all have warm tones and are best worn by the pale brunette. The soft tans, light browns, fawns are equally good for blonde or brunette with clear skin.

Yellow is to repeat its success of last summer. While it is artistic in combination with the white attire of summer, its popularity, more likely, is due to the fact that there is a shade of yellow to flatter every complexion. For the brunette yellow is especially suitable. The blonde must wear it with discrimination as certain yellow imparts a violet cast to the skin. The cold shades, citron, olive and lemon are for the brunette, and the ash blonde will look her fairest blondiness in the faint yellows. Orange is difficult to wear and is so vivid that it is most attractive when used only for contrast. Some brunettes find it whitens their skin. Apricot, not so daring a shade, may be worn either by the fair or dark-haired.

Thistlebloom, another of the season's favored colors, is a flattering choice for the woman who finds the neutral shades, the warm browns and the blues unsuited to her coloring. It is a rose orchid that freshens the color of the skin and may safely be worn by those to whom lavender is impossible. For the dull-haired type it is a salvation.

Green, always good for spring and summer, should be chosen with considerable thought. The blonde may look cheap in the wrong shade, the brunette with sallow skin may take on a greenish cast and the blue-eyed woman become a green-eyed monster, while the Titian-haired girl with ruddy color needs the slate tone. Chosen thoughtfully green is a flattering color that practically every type may wear.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Sneezes Piece of Steel Drill From Nasal Cavity

Philadelphia.—Suffering from a perpetual headache and approaching blindness, the cause of which physicians were unable to determine, Harry M. Hutchinson, an electrician, sneezed from his nasal tubes an inch-and-a-half piece of a quarter-inch steel drill with which he had been stabbed 12 years ago. Hutchinson said that he had been stabbed through the bridge of the nose with a drill during a fight with a fellow workman. While reclining in a barber's chair he was seized with a paroxysm of sneezing and dislodged the obstacle. "My relief was almost instant," said Hutchinson.

PROCLAMATION

Mayor Fitzpatrik Asks for Clean Up and Paint Up Campaign In City.

Come on, let's put things in order. Our whole city can and should be made as clean and orderly as its cleanest home. Then we will have a safer, happier, healthier city.

Ambition in its highest conception is to dream big dreams and make them come true. The splendid ambition to have a city clean and beautiful is soon to become a reality by the cooperation of all the people.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as mayor, and with the hearty approval of many far-seeing and zealous citizens, we hereby proclaim the week of May 4 to 9 1925 as the opening week of a continuous Clean Up and Paint Up campaign.

Away with the rubbish piles! Banish the plague spots! Clean up streets and alleys! Cut the weeds, mow the lawn and trim the hedges! Repair and paint every building that needs it.

We need this thoro cleaning and renovation. It is the sensible thing to do—for the health, safety, thrift, pride and happiness of all our people.

It is everybody's job. Every man, woman and child will be expected to help. Let there be no slackers.

GEO. M. FITZPATRICK,
Mayor.

AL'S LETTER JOLTED A MAILORDER HOUSE.

A certain concern has been sending neckties out in considerable quantities addressed to individuals on approval, with return postage. This concern asked the recipient to either accept the merchandise and pay for it or to return it according to instructions.

He Wrote Them Instead.

Colonel Fairbrother of Greensboro, N. C., informs The Progressive Grocer that he received the usual four ties, but instead of remitting or returning them, he wrote the following letter to the firm:

Dear Sirs:—

This morning's mail brings me your package of four neckties which I never ordered.

Waiving the question as to whether or not it was presumptuous on your part to send a man four neckties and ask him to remit $1.50 for them will say that they are here in good shape—held subject to your disposition.

The 8 cent stamp is also here and you can have it if you come personally after it or send an accredited representative to receive it.

I shall charge you storage at the rate of 10 cents a day on these articles and if not called for within a reasonable time, will give them to some charity bazaar or something of the sort.

There are many first class stores in this city selling neckties at reasonable prices and I do not see why you should heroically undertake the self-appointed task of selecting and sending to me on approval, without any suggestion from me whatever, four neckties which I do not want and which I will not use.

If you conclude to come down to personally conduct the shipment of these ties, which are held subject to your disposition, I will call attention to the fact that we have good hotels and the entertainment committee of the chamber of commerce will no doubt try to make your visit enjoyable. If you send a representative to get the ties and stamps, be sure to give him proper credentials and have him call on me only during business hours.

I am registering this letter so I will know that you received it.

How would you like to trade some neckties for a vinegar recipe?

Do you have any moving picture shows in your town?

Do you think that the cafeteria has come to stay?

Hoping these few lines will find you well, and wishing you the compliments of the season, I am

Respectfully,

Al Fairbrother.

DOUBLE PROGRAM.

"Aunt Billy from Texas" and George Hitler's "Minstrel Boys" form the program to be given at the high school auditorium Tuesday, May 5.

The first number is a short comedy with Franklin Kibler in the leading role as "Aunt Billy." The whole play is a scream and is sure to be well acted as Miss Reynolds is directing it.

Everybody knows what kind of a show George Hitler is always in. Well, here is one better. George is not only in this one, but is the director. Henry Harding, Ralph Smith, Edwin Zeska and Scott Eagleson are the end men and have some clever jokes and songs, while Clinton Truex, Carl Palm, Everett Stocklen and David May will sing the ballads. Eleanor Snyder will give a special dance and song with her accustomed pep.

Fred Wittich helped the boys smooth over the rough spots and declares the show will be a hit. Ralph Barnhart chose and arranged the musical selections.

Built With Method

Houses in Bulgaria are designed so as to blend with the landscape; in fact, they are often indistinguishable from it. This practice dates from the time of the Turkish rule, when it was desirable for Bulgarians to live as unobtrusively as possible.

CAPTAIN HAWK MAY BE CHOSEN GRAND COMMANDER

Bubbling over with enthusiasm Captain Hawk was nearly breathless.

"We captured two cannon and about 150 men in that charge," he said. "All these who were not sent back with prisoners, formed a regiment on the opposite ridge. Generals Grant, McPherson, Logan and others came riding up to where we were forming and we called for a speech from General Grant.

"The general made a brief talk and it is often quoted today.

"The knightly General McPherson then asked General Osterhaus for permission to borrow our regiment so that he could push on and bring up his wagon train. We moved on toward Port Gibson, but we were fired upon and were compelled to stop for the night.

"It was my pleasure to be picket officer that night, and a great pleasure it was, too since General McPherson was on the line with me for quite a while.

Work Praised.

"The next morning we were joined by Colonel Cradlebaugh, who spoke to us while sitting on the fence. He said that at headquarters the night before he had heard many compliments that were paid the 114th Infantry for making the closing charge, and declared:

" 'I would have given all that I ever was or ever expected to be had I been with you on that charge.'

"Poor fellow—it was but a short time after this that he received his dose of lead during the charge on the works at Vicksburg."

And Captain Hawk then launched into a description of the horrors of the Civil war—bloody gore, screaming bullets, annihilation, destruction for the preservation of the Union.

Answered First Call.

He told of his enlistment April 22, 1861, under the first call of President Lincoln, a youth of nineteen years; how he subsequently was mustered out and then reinlisted, of his activities as captain of a company thru the entire Vicksburg campaign, at the capture of Fort Hindman, Arkansas, in the Red River campaign of '64 under General Banks, and of his work as mustering officer in 1865 at New Orleans.

At the completion of the war Captain Hawk went to his home in McArthur, Ohio, where he was born in 1841. In 1873, he came to Sacramento where he has been engaged principally in commercial, real estate and agricultural pursuits.

By reason of his having served in the California legislature he has been helpful in securing much legislation for the welfare of his comrades, obtaining many appropriations, among them being $15,000 for expenses to the fiftieth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg.

Member of Board.

For some years past, he has been a director of the Veterans' Home of California. His term will soon expire and his friends are urging his reappointment to the board. It is also considered likely that he will be a candidate for the department commandership of the Grand Army of the Republic.

By only by a narrow margin Captain Hawk was defeated for the post at the national encampment last year. The local Summer post, the largest in the world and a number of others in the state, have heartily endorsed his candidacy and the veteran now is being persuaded by his friends and comrades to be California's candidate for the position.

The California-Nevada department of the G. A. R., has never had a national department commander, while New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Ohio have been honored thirty-four times.

The national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic will be held this year, August 30 to September 5, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, and local Civil war veterans are hoping that when the conclave is over Captain Hawk will return to Sacramento as commander-in-chief.

Ancient Dispensary

About 4600 B. C., a public dispensary was established in Egypt, the medical attendant for which received the equivalent of $500 a year for his services. This was at that time about five times the amount received by a skilled laborer.

Prettier, Too

In the bowl with the growing bulbs use the large glass beads like those used in kindergartens. You will find them a change from the ordinary stones.

THE BARTER.

I have sold the farm where my youth was spent,
And my days of wisdom and glad content.
And my friends have come to rejoice with me,
For at last, they say, I am truly free.
But I know full well, tho I may not tell,
I have sold the beauty that fed my heart.

I have sold the spaces of azure sky
Where the winged clouds went in cohorts by,
I have sold the fields that the sunshine blest,
Where the wild wind played with the grasses' crest,
I have sold the groves, and the fairy coves,
And the placid pond where the lilies grew.

I have sold the flowers of a thousand hues
That have welcomed me in the morning dews,
And the tender music of bygone days
When the sweet birds sang me their roundelays.
I have sold the oak that memories woke
And the trustful love of my creatures dumb.

I have sold the tints of the coming spring
With the perfumed air that the summers bring;
And for cash have bartered the living gold
That the treasure-troves of the autumn hold.
I have lost the gleam on my ice-bound stream,
And the wonderland of the drifting snow.

I have purchased ease for my weary hands,
And the way before me hath no quicksands,
But my eyes are seeking the scenes they know,
And my heart is sick for the long ago
When across the sheen of my acres green
Were inscribed in beauty the thoughts of God.

—Elma C. Wildman.

Boston's Boast

The geological survey says that Boston is often spoken of as "the hub of the universe," though it is not near the center of even the state of which it is the capital. The "hub" in this phrase implies the claim that from Boston as a center intellectual spokes radiate to the utmost rim of the country's wheel of refinement.

At the Top of Tulip Hill

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

VIRGINIA DAY felt the necessity for helping with the earnings of the family income.

"But, my dear," said her mother as they discussed the subject for the nth time, "you help so much at home. Practically all of the housekeeping falls on your shoulders."

Virginia tossed credit aside. "It is nothing. I can continue to help you and still earn a penny to add to the family exchequer."

"If it would make you happier—"

"It isn't that, dear mother. I am happy. But everyone is more nearly satisfied with himself if he is earning his own salt. Isn't it so?"

"It seems to be in this generation," admitted the mother.

"It is so. And when I see women with two or three little children and all their housework to do, pursuing some sort of lucrative work, I am ashamed of my laziness." Virginia had evidently been giving the matter of her own efficiency some serious thought and her mother could not help admiring her lovely daughter.

"Have you decided on anything in particular? What can you do?"

"Sell tulips!" announced Virginia simply.

"But—"

She cut her mother's protest short. "I know I don't own a single bulb nor a square inch of ground, but I have a scheme."

"Seems to me you'll need one, daughter," said the mother.

"You remember the other day when I went with Julia to a tea place out on Long island? Well, that is where my scheme was born. And yesterday I went out on the train to see if it were a real inspiration that I had had—and it was. We had passed, in driving, the loveliest field of tulips I had ever beheld. Then and there something told me that opportunity was whispering in my ear. I had read somewhere or other that to be efficient in life we must learn to capture these winged moments and make use of them. I recognized this as a golden chance, and I believe it was."

The mother looked at her daughter with widening eyes. Was this her little girl speaking with so much understanding of life?

"It seems that the man who owns the tulip field had started in haphazard fashion a bulb farm, but had not had the proper business methods for getting his goods into the market. I saw at once a whole plan and I outlined it to him. He was delighted, poor soul. He is artistic, but he is not so practical. We decided to put the tulips all in divisions of color for next spring, hundreds of each variety with the beginning that he already has planted so irregularly. My job all winter will be to get orders from hotels and tea rooms in the city for certain color schemes for certain days. For instance, I will sell a big hotel scarlet tulips for Monday and Tuesday, yellow for the following two days, and so forth, and eliminate the profit of the middleman or florist. I, myself, will deliver them in our old station wagon, and when I get too busy we will hire a truck. Do you see? It will be practically no expense to me and we are to divide profits. He is willing—even enthusiastic."

Virginia went on planning and carrying out her scheme and went so far as to suggest to one tea room owner on Fifth avenue that a rainbow afternoon tea feature would be attractive. She planned for them a series of tables decorated entirely in single colors from the tea cloth and china service to the tulips in the center—each one different. Her idea was to have a real rainbow effect as you entered the long room, carried out in colored tables.

"Moth, I am so wrapped up in our scheme and so enthusiastic that I am probably a bore to you at home. Am I not?"

"On the contrary, dear, you are a marvel to me," said her mother.

"Does Mr. Harron have a family?" asked the mother, quite naturally.

Virginia blushed as her mother had never seen her blush before. And in her confusion she was lovely.

"No—he has never been married. He's a sort of an artist who lives in this little bungalow and had started the tulip farm to keep the pot boiling, so to speak," explained Virginia.

"Oh," said her mother.

Virginia became more and more certain that the moment that she had laid eyes upon the field of tulips had been one of the golden opportunities of her life. The idea was materializing and with it was growing a very wonderful romance.

"You know I just felt that fate was guiding me that day when I came to make the business proposition to you about the tulips," she said one evening when she had been having dinner with her partner.

"And has it been a kind fate?" he asked.

"It has, Frank. You know it has. We shall build the new bungalow at the crest of the hill and its windows shall look out upon the riotous field of color in spring. Other seasons will take care of themselves."

"Might we call it Tulip hill, dear?" he asked.

"We might—it's a pretty name. But we won't tell them what wonders there are at the top of the hill. Only you and I shall know that," said Virginia.

New Uses for Castor Oil

Railway chemical engineers have produced a special lubricant from castor oil, which is now being used with great success on the Chinese Eastern railway. It is said to be efficient and economical as a car lubricant. Castor oil is coming into extensive use for technical and medicinal purposes. In China it is also used as a food.—Popular Science Monthly.

VETERAN OF TWO WARS ANSWERS TO TAPS

Columbus, May 4.—Capt. Edward Mendell Slemmons, 46, deputy director of the Columbus Department of Service, and commander of Franklin Post No. 1, American Legion, died at his home, 60 Cleveland Ave., early yesterday. He had been seriously ill with arterio solerosis for about three months.

Captain Slemmons was born in Columbus and had resided here all his life except during the periods of his service in the Spanish-American and world wars. He was a member of Co. C, Ohio Vol. Inf., during the Spanish-American war, and saw service in Porto Rico.

Prior to the world war he was a captain in the Ohio National Guard and soon after the United States entered the war he went to the Camp Hancock officers' training school where he was commissioned first lieutenant. He served almost two years during the late war at Camp Perry, Fort Snelling, Fort Brady and Camp Grant.

Besides the American Legion and Spanish War Veterans, he was a member of Goodale Lodge F. & A. M., Junia Lodge of Elks, the Columbus Republican Club and the Republican Glee Club.

He is survived by his widow and one brother, Allen O. Slemmons, San Francisco, Calif.

Joint military and Mosonic services will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m., at the Schoedinger Chapel, Fifth and State streets, with members of the American Legion, Spanish War Veterans and Goodale Lodge participating. Burial will be in Green Lawn Cemetery.

Precious Metals

Statisticians compile some enormous figures at times when they are seeking a total for something, as for instance the amount of gold and silver in circulation in the world, or if not in circulation, accounted for. They have set forth that the value of gold is, roughly speaking, $18,100,874,536, whereas the value of silver is about $16,256,913,158.

Rooks Affected by Cholera

In the years 1831-1832 cholera visited the British islands and killed over 60,000 people. On the estate of the marquess of Sligo was the largest rookery in Ireland, and as soon as the disease broke out in the neighborhood the rooks cleared out. They appear to have gone to the sea, for on the coast immense numbers were found lying dead. When the outbreak was over the survivors straggled back.

Ancient Tree in Utah Park

A juniper tree not less than 3,000 years old has been found in the Cache National forest in northern Utah near the Logan Canyon highway and is being protected by the United States forest service. Scientists say it is, perhaps, the oldest juniper tree in the world. It is 42 feet high and measures 7 feet 6 inches in diameter near the ground.

Unchanging Climate

The Isle of Pines has one continuous summer, the variations of temperature throughout the entire year being scarcely as great as often occur in a single summer month in many of the northern states. It is rare, indeed, when the thermometer in summer on the island registers as high as 90 degrees, and in winter the mercury never falls below 50 degrees.

The point of a needle is exceedingly sharp, but contrasted with the stinger of a bee it is not sharp at all. MORE FRIGHTFUL THAN DANGEROUS

Cougar Not So Menacing a Creature as Is Generally Supposed.

Washington, D. C.—The cougars which recently have been causing alarm in Washington state are not so menacing as they are reported to be, according to a bulletin from the Washington (D. C.) headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"The cougar, or mountain lion, while powerful enough to be dangerous to man, is in reality extremely timid," says the bulletin, based on a communication from Dr. E. W. Nelson.

"Owing to its being a potentially dangerous animal, the popular conception of it is that of a fearsome beast, whose savage exploits are celebrated in the folklore of our frontier. As a matter of fact, few wild animals are less dangerous, although there are authentic accounts of wanton attacks upon people, just as there are authentic instances of buck deer and moose becoming aggressive. It has a wild, screaming cry which is thrillingly impressive when the shades of evening are throwing a mysterious gloom over the forests. In the mountains of Arizona one summer a mountain lion repeatedly passed along a series of ledges high above my cabin at dusk, uttering this loud weird cry, popularly supposed to resemble the scream of a terrified woman.

Is a Tireless Wanderer.

"The mountain lion is usually nocturnal, but in regions where it is not hunted it not infrequently goes abroad by day. It is a tireless wanderer, often traveling many miles in a single night, sometimes in search of game and again in search of new hunting grounds. I have repeatedly followed its tracks for long distances along trails, and in northern Chihuahua I once tracked one for a couple of miles from a bare rocky hill straight across the open, grassy plain toward a treeless desert mountain, for which it was heading, some eight or ten miles away.

"Although inoffensive as to people, this cat is such a fierce and relentless enemy of large game and live stock that it is everywhere an outlaw.

Secures Prey by Stealth.

"A mountain lion usually secures its prey by a silent, cautious stalk, taking advantage of every cover until within striking distance, and then, with one or more powerful leaps, dashing the victim to the ground with all the stunning impact of its weight.

"In a beautiful live-oak forest on the mountain of San Luis Potosi I once trailed one of these great cats to the spot where it had killed a deer a short time before, and could plainly read in the trail the story of the admirable skill with which it had moved from cover to cover until it reached a knoll at one side of the little glade where the deer was feeding. Then a great leap carried it to the deer's back and struck the victim to the ground with such violence that it slid 10 or 12 feet across the sloping ground, apparently having been killed on the instant."

Alaska's 1924 Trade Is $480,635 Below 1923

Seattle, Wash.—Alaska's commerce for 1924 compared favorably with that of previous years, except in the value of precious metal and domestic merchandise shipped to the United States, the annual report of John C. McBride of Juneau, collector of customs for Alaska, announced. The year had a total commerce of $92,595,113, a loss of $480,635, compared with 1923.

Alaskans Get Cream, Milk Delivered on String

Nome, Alaska.—The milkman here doesn't worry about spilling his milk. He calls from house to house and delivers a block of frozen reindeer milk or cream equal to a pint or a quart. A white cord frozen into the block of milk serves as a handle to facilitate delivering.

The blocks of milk and cream are tastily drapped in oiled paper looking for all the world like ice cream. One feature about the milk business here is that so long as it remains frozen there is no deterioration in the quantity or quality.

Lives in Sewer

Youngstown, Ohio.—Police are seeking employment for a man, sixty-three, discovered making his home in a large concrete sewer under the Oak street bridge. He had dug small pits for fireplaces and ditches to carry off the drainage. The man said he had waged a losing fight against destitution.

HERE YOU ARE GIRLS

Girls—the Real Secret For Fascinating the Men.

The secret's out at last, girls, if we may believe Brenda Uelland, writing in this week's Liberty. She believes she has found the explanation for the tremendous fascination exerted by some women over men, and explains her discoveries in detail.

"First, it is a help to be good-looking, but it isn't a necessity," she says. "Come to think of it, it is only necessary to avoid certain accoutrements, like glasses, sidecombs, surgical shoes or tailored suits with unbending skirts. Beyond that, character and behavior are more important than looks or get-up.

"The fundamental requirement is that you like men—like to see them, like to have them around. Next, you must be flirtatious. This is something difficult to define. It means, being sportive arch, saying things you don't mean as though you meant them, and things you do mean as though you didn't.

"There are many women who can't do this at all, some of them gloriously beautiful. Instead they are man-to-man, straight-from-the-shoulder, hold-'em-Vassar, and there is nothing so fatal as this to the art of making men fall in love with you.

L'Amour is a strange thing. Under its influence almost everybody begins to behave in a crazy way. You meet a young man. He takes a fancy to you. The friendship sails along in a pleasant fashion. But at a certain point something happens. You begin to care, as they say. Suddenly all your charming ease is gone.

"Now, my theory is that the most fascinating women in the world are those rare ones who can keep their original nonchalance all the time, in love as well as out."

Simplicity.

HOLDUP MEN MADE HAUL IN RESTAURANT

G. G. Hartman Forced to Hand Over $134.75 at The Point of a Gun.

Two masked bandits at 6 o'clock Monday morning, entered the Waldorf restaurant, 81 South Fourth street, Columbus, and at the point of a revolver forced G. G. Hartman to hand over $134.75 a part of which was taken from a safe and the remainder from Hartman's pockets.

Hartman was alone in the restaurant when the men entered, with their faces concealed by black masks. One of the men leveled a revolver and the other went thru Hartman's pockets and obtained $85. They went to the safe which they compelled Hartman to open and obtained $59.75.

In reporting the robbery to police, Hartman described the men as being between 25 and 30 years of age. One wore a brown sweater and brown cap, while the other wore a gray suit and grap cap. It is believed that the men escaped in an automobile.
